A Division of the Rancho Simi Foundation

December Work Party

The December work party involved clearing a portion of the Bus Canyon stream bed in Challenger Park. The purpose was to reduce the potential for flooding. Thanks so much to Martin DeGoey, Bart Hibbs, Mike Kuhn and Jan Dab for a job well done.

December, 2011 RSTB Christmas Party

The 2011 RSTB Christmas Party was again hosted by Ursula Christie at her lovely home. Several dozen Trailblazers attended the potluck party dinner and enjoyed a wide variety of tasty appetizers, entrees, and desserts. More importantly the gathering offered the opportunity to catch up on the past year with friends, swap tales of past Trailblazer experiences, and to discuss potential future adventures. Glad to be members of the Trailblazers "family," everyone had a wonderful time. Thanks again to Ursula for her hospitality.

--- SPECIAL OUTING ---

March 7th – 11th, 2012
*Havasupai Indian Reservation – Havasu Falls**

Camping (in Havasu Canyon), hiking (Hualapai Canyon, Havasu Canyon, Supai), and sightseeing (Havasupai Falls, Beaver Falls, Mooney Falls) in perhaps the most unique natural and cultural area in the Grand Canyon. Havasu Creek has towering red walls, travertine pools with turquoise waters, stunning cascades, and world-renowned hiking.

--- Rest In Peace --- 1928 – 2011

Tom Frye, a longtime member of the Rancho Simi Trail Blazers, died recently. He was 83. The OTP Hiking & Debating Society donated $320 to the Trail Blazers in his name. Those of us who knew Tom had great respect for his gentle humanity. We also have received a $100 donation from Martin DeGoey and family.

CHUMASH AND RATTLESNAKES

Rattlesnakes were pets of the sun (as the chief deity). The threat of a rattlesnake bite begins in the early spring and continues through most of the fall. An 'antap, i.e., a shaman, would perform a rattlesnake dance to protect the entire community against rattlesnake bites. Rattlesnakes only bite those individuals who are bad. It was also believed that the folklore of the Chumash could only be told during the winter months when the rattlesnakes were in hibernation. Otherwise, someone would be bitten by a rattlesnake. (Source: Travis Hudson and Ernest Underhay, Crystals in the Sky: An Intellectual Odyssey Involving Chumash Astronomy, Cosmology and Rock Art, page 136.)

CHUMASH AND THE BLACK BEAR

What is clear from paleontological remains and archaeological excavations is that prior to the event of the Anglo-American period of settlement the black bear did not extend further south in California than San Luis Obispo County and the Central Valley. As grizzly bear numbers dwindled, primarily as a result of poisoning and only secondarily by shooting them, the range of the black bear extended southerly and into the high country. Certainly grizzly bears were masters of their domains and were given wide berths by black bears.

Pedro Fages' account of his travels in California, which represent the first detailed descriptions of California Indians, includes two interesting observations about the Chumash in the San Luis Obispo area. He describes one occasion when Indians coming to greet him and his party were accompanied by a bear cub. Elsewhere he indicates that the Indians hunted bears and would capture any surviving (I presume young) cubs, subsequently raising them in their villages until they were old enough to slaughter as food. Young bear cubs are fun, cute and cuddly and bond easily with humans. As they grow older, their presence becomes more problematic. Since the reference is to hunting bears, I presume that their quarry was the black bear – grizzly bears being too formidable a prey.

CHUMASH CLOTHING ACCORDING TO FERNANDO

[from Travis Hudson (ed.), Breath of the Sun(1980), p.5]

“Every year in Mission times the priests gave cloth to the Indian women to make dresses. The yearly ration was some cloth for a silk shawl, eight feet long and four feet wide of various colors and fringed, a piece of cloth for sheets, and a piece of cloth, maybe two, three, or four yards long, also of various colors. The nuns [unmarried women] were given better cloth, for they belonged to the priests. Each man received three yards of yellow muslin for a G-string, and six yards for a sheet for wrapping about himself. A man also received a serape, with a hole to put his head through. Children were given, say, two yards of yellow muslin for G-strings, according to the needs of the child. The priests gave the vaqueros a saddle, a vest, pants, jacket, and several yards of yellow muslin for sheets and for handkerchiefs. [The clothing consisted of coarse wool or sack-cloth. The men wore a short tunic, called a coton’, G-string (about 1.5 yards long by 0.5 yards wide) and a blanket. The women also received a blanket, a white cotton blouse, and a woolen skirt, the latter in any of several colors. Alcaldes received the same type of clothing that the Spanish or Mexican people wore. This included leggings, hat, boots, and a manga blanket.] The vaqueros were the only ones who wore short pants; the Indian men ...wore only a G-string and a blanket. It was only in 1847 that Indian men in Ventura began to wear pants, and then they wore the G-string underneath.”

An alcade was an Indian official of the mission, elected by the neophytes each year. His duties consisted of acting as justice of the peace as well as bringing before the priest anyone accused of a crime. He also carried out punishment and was exempt from corporal punishment.

In most cases Indians possessed only one set of clothing. Men, for example, washed themselves with a sweat, washed their G-string, then returned to the temescal (sweathouse) while their G-string dried.

The pattern of clothing reflects the strict class structure in colonial Spain and Mexico. Indian men wore G-strings, while the Spanish and later Mexicans wore pants. Vaqueros, while Indians, were of higher status, having horses, as were the Alcaldes. Indians went barefoot, while mestizos wore sandals and Spaniards and Mexicans wore shoes or boots (vaqueros were an exception). If Indians were caught making sandals for themselves, they were punished.

November 12th 2011 - Malibu Creek State Park

It was one of those drizzly and gloomy days, just perfect for staying in bed late. Still, this didn't stop seven intrepid Trail Blazers from enjoying a fine hike. Because of all the rain the previous night, and fear of a very muddy trail, we thought it might be wise not to enter the Park at our usual Cornell and Mulholland trailhead. Instead, we took the Grassland Trail, to Craig's Road, heading north into Park headquarters.

Only a few minutes into our hike, we saw five deer to the left of the trail. Moments later, there were four coyotes to the right of the trail. The day would prove to be one of our very best wildlife hikes ever. Two more deer and another coyote were spotted before the hike was over.

After a brief stop at Park headquarters, we visited the Rock Pool. Soap must have been introduced into the Malibu Creek system, much further upstream. There were mini-glacier like soap suds floating all the creeks, lakes and ponds, and all the way to the Malibu Dam. Our hike continued to Century Lake, the Redwood Forest, The M*A*S*H site and then on to the Malibu Dam. Retracing our steps back to the trailhead, we covered just under 10 miles, with just under 600. of elevation gain. The hike was enjoyed by all in attendance.

November 26th 2011 - Chivo Canyon

18 hikers met on a mild Saturday morning in Simi Valley near the mouth of Chivo Canyon in the Marr Ranch Open Space in northeast Simi Valley. Our hike began along Trail #22 (as shown on the RSRPD "Park Facilities Directory Map of Simi Valley and Oak Park") as it headed up Chivo Canyon. At 0.7 mile

we turned left (west) on Trail #23 and followed it through a side canyon as it climbed westward to an overlook that revealed Tapo Canyon. Returning (via a loop) to Chivo Canyon we continued north to the head of lower Chivo Canyon where several of the hikers turned around and returned to the parking area. The remaining hikers continued carefully through a narrow gorge into upper Chivo Canyon and its large oak woodland. Eventually we climbed out of the canyon and made our way to a rocky promontory on the east side of lower Chivo Canyon where we had sweeping 360-degree views of the entire area. We then returned via the same route to the parking area. Our very pleasant outing covered 10 miles with a total elevation gain/loss of about 1,800'.

December 3rd 2011 - Simi Peak via China Flat

Eleven hikers met on a chilly Saturday morning in Simi Valley to car pool to the Nicholas Flat Trail trailhead.

We drove through the Santa Monica Mountains via Hwy 23 to Pacific Coast Highway (Hwy 1) and then headed west to the parking lot at Leo Carrillo State Park where we were met by two other hikers. Our journey provided magnificent views of mountains, valleys, and a clear blue sky. Once the group had assembled, we began a steady ascent toward Nicholas Pond, gaining about 1,600' in about 2.5 miles and testing our circulatory systems. The chilly morning temperature and a cool breeze combined perfectly to keep us from overheating. There were great views of the mountains and the ocean as well as somewhat murky views of several of the Channel Islands. The rain the day before had washed the dust from the trees and bushes and the air was fresh and clean. We crested the mountain, descended through a large meadow, and followed the trail down to Nicholas Pond which was surprisingly full; two ducks were busy at its far end. We then followed a short trail up to some large boulders and enjoyed a lunch break. As we did so we also enjoyed the view toward the ocean looking out over San Nicholas Canyon. After lunch we returned the way we came, taking the Willow Creek Trail on the last leg of our journey. We had most of the hike to ourselves; we encountered no other hikers until we had nearly finished our hike. Our very pleasant outing covered 7.4 miles with a total elevation gain of nearly 2,200' of elevation gain/loss.
